PROACT REVAMPS WEB SITE FOR IMPROVED COMMUNICATIONS

Eagan-based nonprofit serving people with disabilities now offers cleaner, more organized site, making information easier to access

In a move that was several months in the making ProAct, Inc., an Eagan-based nonprofit, has completely revamped its Web site to communicate more effectively with its users and the general public.

The site, at proactinc.org, uses flash animation to display photos of people with disabilities in a variety of work, community and skill building situations. "It's clean, modern and organized, and it communicates much more information to our visitors," said executive and development specialist Heidi Anderson, who was closely involved with the project. Up to date news items, as well as information on services offered to people with disabilities and business round out an extensive list of items users can access.

ProAct is a 501(c)3 nonprofit corporation with facilities in Eagan, Red Wing and Zumbrota that has served the needs of people for more than 35 years. Serving the Twin Cities, southern Minnesota and western Wisconsin, ProAct provides services for people with disabilities and other barriers to employment and community inclusion.
