

ProAct introduces new Skills Training Assessment

Mission

To provide person-centered services that enhances the quality of life for people with disabilities in the areas of employment, life skills and community inclusion.

ProAct has developed an assessment tool designed to provide participants hands on training and experience in a variety of work activities while evaluating and enhancing their interpersonal and work readiness skills.

The Skills Training Assessment introduces participants to a variety of employment options, both in group and individually, through an evaluation process over a period of up to 6 months.

- The process is individualized with an evaluator facilitating the training process and assessing performance throughout while being paid for work produced (Paid work activities will be sporadic due to the design of the assessment thus those on MAEPD are not appropriate for the service.)
- Assessment locations include in-center at ProAct and at community employment sites (enclaves). Assessments run three days per week (Wednesday-Friday).
- Eleven key worker traits are assessed during this process that include task performance, supervisory relationships, supervisory concerns, co-worker relationships, dependability and attendance, physical characteristics, work safety, acceptance of work role, response to work environment, worker traits, and personal characteristics.
- A final report summarizes the process and includes appropriate next steps.
